Introduction xiii

Part 1: Encountering Comprehensible Input: Conceptual Foundation 1

1 Comprehensible Input Defined 3
Comprehensible Input 3
What is Input? 4
Comprehensibility of Input 6
Nature of Comprehensible Input 8
Linguistic elements 9
Cultural elements 11
Semiotic elements 12
Stylistic elements 14
Input Versus Output 15
Encountering Comprehensible Input 16
Chapter Summary 19

2 Theoretical Foundation of Input and Comprehensibility 20
Laying the Groundwork: Origins and Historical Antecedents 20
Theories of Processability and Comprehensibility of Input 21
Cognitive load theory 21
Automaticity theory 23
Schema theory 24
Dual-coding theory 26
Multimodality theory 27
Constructivist theory 29
Sociocultural theory 30

Poststructural theory 32
Hybridity theory 33
Chapter Summary 35

3 Linguistic Perspectives on Input 36
Applied Linguistic Perspectives 36
Sociolinguistic Perspectives 40
Psycholinguistic Perspectives 44
Neurolinguistic Perspectives 47
Computational Linguistic Perspectives 50
Chapter Summary 53

Part 2: Comprehensible Input: Second Language Acquisition 55

4 Input in Cognitive Processing-oriented Theories 57
Cognition and L2 Learning Processes 57
First Language-based Inferences 59
Information Processing 61
Attention, Control and Knowledge Processes 62
Focal and peripheral attention 62
Controlled/automatic processing 64
Declarative and procedural knowledge 65
Explicit and implicit knowledge 66
Schema Theory 69
Connectionism 71
Chapter Summary 72

5 Input in Learner and Interaction-centered Theories 74
Input Hypothesis 74
Nature of processes of L2 attainment: acquisition versus learning and the monitor model 75
Nature of input: Natural order, CI and i+1 78
Nature of processing and production: Innate acquisition resources, and the Silent Period 81
Role of learner variables: Affective filter 82
Interaction Hypothesis 85
Output Hypothesis 88
Chapter Summary 90

6 Input in Socially-oriented Theories 92
Social Theories of L2A 92
Social Distance 93
Psychological Distance 95
Outcomes of Social and Psychological Distance 96
Patterns of cultural practice 96
Pidginized input 98
Individual Versus Society in L2A 99
Language Socialization 100
Activity Theory 103
Chapter Summary 106

7 Input in Alternative SLA Theories 107
Socio-cognitive Theory 107
Dynamic Systems Theory 109
Ecological Theory 110
Complexity/Chaos Theory 111
Critical Period Hypothesis 114
Interlanguage Theory 117
A Comparative Synthesis 119
Chapter Summary 119

Part 3: Comprehensibility-related Factors in L2 Teaching and Assessment 121

8 Input-related Factors in L2 Teaching 123
Meaning-Focused Input 123
Relevant and Coherent Input 125
Multimodal Oral, Aural and Visual Input 127
Modified Input 129
Authentic Input 132
Chapter Summary 134

9 Learner-related Factors 135
L2 Self-Concept 135
Power, positioning, identity, investment and CI 135
Affective Factors 137
Motivation 138

Anxiety 140
Cognitive Factors 142
Language aptitude 143
Learner styles 144
Metacognitive Factors 145
Beliefs about L2A 146
Learning strategies 147
Chapter Summary 149

10 Culture and Context-related Factors 150
Culture and L2 Learning 150
CI and Culturally Relevant and Contextual Affordances 152
CI and Cultural Perspectives, Practices and Products 155
CI and Cultural Dynamism and Symbolism 156
CI and Culture Shock 158
CI and Native and Non-Native Dynamics in the Classroom 160
Chapter Summary 161

11 Discourse, Interaction and Modification-related Factors 163
Interaction- and Discourse-related Factors and CI 163
Cooperative learning and scaffolding 163
Modifications in discourse and pragmatics 166
Modification-related Factors and CI 168
Modifications in curriculum and instructional materials 168
Teacher-related modification considerations 172
Learner-related modification considerations 174
Setting-related modification considerations 177
Chapter Summary 182

12 Modifications in Assessment-related Factors and CI 184
Purposes of Assessment and CI 184
Formative assessment and CI 185
Summative assessment and CI 186
Approaches to L2 Testing and CI 188
Integrative versus discrete-point tests 188
Direct versus indirect tests 189
Norm-referenced versus criterion-referenced tests 191

CI and authenticity, dynamism and formality in L2 tests 192
Kinds of Tests and CI 194
Proficiency tests 194
Placement tests 195
Achievement tests 196
Diagnostic tests 197
Accommodated Assessment of Language Skills and CI 197
Listening and reading 197
Accommodated Assessment of Productive Skills and CI 200
Speaking and writing 200
Chapter Summary 202
13 Conclusions 204
