

Contents

Contributors	xvi
Preface	xxvii
Acknowledgements	xxviii

Part 1: Context

Chapter 1: The importance of health and wellbeing	3
Donna Pendergast and Susanne Garvis
Introduction	3
Health	5
Wellbeing	6
Global context: Health and wellbeing	7
Australian context: Health and wellbeing	11
Conclusion	17
Summary	19
Questions	19
References	19
Chapter 2: Classifying health and wellbeing: Applying the International Classification of Functioning, Disability and Health to early years learners	22
Jane McCormack and Sharynne McLeod
Introduction	22
International Classification of Functioning, Disability and Health – Children and Youth Version (ICF-CY)	23
Body Functions and Structures	25
Activities and Participation	26
Contextual (Environmental and Personal) factors	28
Application of the ICF-CY	31
Conclusion	33
Summary	34
Questions	34
References	34

Part 2: Dimensions of health and wellbeing

Chapter 3: Addressing developmental challenges to improve the wellbeing of children

39

Matthew Manning

Introduction	39
Policy questions	39
Life-course perspective	40
Does developmental prevention work?	48
Addressing the complexity of human development in the future	50
Conclusion	52
Summary	53
Questions	53
References	53

Chapter 4: Communication development

57

Jane McCormack, Sharynne McLeod and Linda Harrison

Introduction	57
What is communication?	57
Laying the foundations: 0–12 months (babies)	60
First words: 1–2 years (toddlers)	61
Putting it into practice: 2–5 years (preschoolers)	63
Language for learning: 5–12 years (school-aged children)	66
Conclusion	68
Summary	70
Questions	70
References	71
Appendix	73

Chapter 5: Physically educated: Developing children's health and wellbeing through movement and motor skills

77

Timothy Lynch

Introduction	77
Approaching quality physical education	78
Human movement and motor skills in childhood	83
Conclusion	89
Summary	90
Questions	90
References	90

Chapter 6: Sexual abuse prevention education

95

Kerryann Walsh, Donna Berthelsen and Jan Nicholson

Introduction	95
Definition of sexual abuse, prevalence and effects	96
A brief history of child sexual abuse prevention education	97

Prevention	98
Conclusion	106
Summary	107
Questions	107
Acknowledgement	107
References	107
Chapter 7: Child safety	111
Susanne Garvis and Donna Pendergast
Introduction	111
Managing the environment	111
Indoor safety	113
Outdoor safety	120
Conclusion	123
Summary	124
Questions	124
References	124
Chapter 8: Social determinants of health and wellbeing	126
Margaret Sims
Introduction	126
Social inequality	128
Causes of social inequality	130
Addressing social inequality	131
Social inequality and stress	134
Social determinants and the role of early childhood educators	135
Conclusion	137
Summary	138
Questions	138
References	139
Chapter 9: Friendships	141
Maryanne Theobald, Susan Danby, Catherine Thompson and Karen Thorpe
Introduction	141
Importance of friendships in the early years	141
Researching children's friendships	143
Characteristics of friendships	143
Making friends in the early years	149
Disputes among friends and within peer groups	153
Making friends in multilingual settings	154
Educators' role in supporting children's friendships	155
Conclusion	156
Summary	157
Questions	157

Acknowledgements	157
References	158
Chapter 10: Food for thought: The role of teachers and parents in children's food choices	161
Natalie Parletta
Introduction	161
Physical health and wellbeing	162
Healthy children are better learners	163
Why should education settings be involved in children's nutrition literacy?	166
How parents and caregivers can encourage healthy diets	170
Conclusion	173
Summary	174
Questions	174
References	174
Chapter 11: Body Image of pre-adolescents	177
Galina Daraganova
Introduction	177
Rationale: Impact of body image on health	177
Children in focus: Longitudinal Study of Australian Children	178
Research in focus: Body image	178
Action in focus: Weight management strategies	182
Implications in focus: Children's wellbeing	184
Summary of research	190
Conclusion	191
Summary	192
Questions	192
Acknowledgements	192
References	193
Part 3: Applications
Chapter 12: Teaching for social and emotional learning	197
Wendi Beamish and Fiona Bryer
Introduction	197
What is SEL?	198
Framing SEL	198
Situating SEL within the whole-school context	200
Working through the SEL teaching cycle	201
Assess	203
Plan	204

Implement and evaluate	205
Conclusion	206
Summary	207
Questions	207
References	207
Chapter 13: Talking circles	210
Jennifer Cartmel, Marilyn Casley and Kerry Smith
Introduction	210
Talking circle process defined	210
How talking circles began	211
Structure of a talking circle	215
Benefits of talking circles	216
How to conduct talking circles	218
Conclusion	220
Summary	221
Questions	221
References	221
Chapter 14: Partnering with families	223
Sivanes Phillipson
Acknowledgement	223
Introduction	223
Families and their children's wellbeing	224
Partnership concept	225
Educators' role	227
Engaging and partnering with families	229
Conclusion	233
Summary	234
Questions	234
References	234
Chapter 15: Being a digital image-maker: Young children using the digital camera in learning	238
Narelle Lemon
Introduction	238
Technology to support learning	239
Digital camera in the learning environment: An example in practice	241
The boys: Unsayable stories	242
Conclusion	248
Summary	249
Questions	249
References	249

Chapter 16: Promoting wellbeing with educationally disadvantaged children through community partnerships	253
Susan Whatman
Introduction	253
Promoting health, physical activity and wellbeing in education: Some definitions, policies and principles	254
Understanding how culture, identity, safety and pride promote wellbeing	260
Promoting wellbeing through salutogenic (strengths-based) approaches	262
Conclusion	264
Summary	265
Questions	265
References	265
Chapter 17: Supporting resilience	269
Andrea Nolan, Karen Stagnitti, Ann Taket and Siobhan Casey
Introduction	269
Nature of resilience	270
Supporting resilience in the early years	270
Classroom practice	273
Conclusion	278
Summary	280
Questions	280
Acknowledgements	280
References	280
Chapter 18: Move Well Eat Well: Case study of a successful settings-based approach to health promotion	283
Janet Dymont, Sherridan Emery, Theresa Doherty and Mary Eckhardt
Acknowledgement	283
Introduction	283
Childhood obesity	284
Approaches to childhood obesity prevention	284
The settings approach	285
Move Well Eat Well: A settings approach to health promotion	285
Profiling Move Well Eat Well against IUHPE guidelines	290
Conclusion	296
Summary	297
Questions	297
References	297

Chapter 19: Fostering children's wellbeing through play opportunities	299
Marjory Ebbeck, Hoi Yin Bonnie Yim and Lai Wan Maria Lee
Introduction	299
Policy development: Wellbeing in young children	299
Play as the foundation of children's wellbeing	302
Assessing children's play materials for health and safety: Applying criteria	306
Play opportunities in the digital age	307
Commercialisation of play opportunities	308
Reducing culture and gender stereotyping and gender role conformity in play	309
Conclusion	310
Summary	311
Questions	311
References	311
Chapter 20: Bullying and social emotional wellbeing in children	315
Cathrine Neilsen-Hewett and Kay Bussey
Introduction	315
What is bullying?	315
Who bullies and who is bullied?	317
How does bullying impact children's health and socio-emotional wellbeing?	321
Cycle of bullying: Importance of early intervention	324
Conclusion	327
Summary	328
Questions	328
References	328
Chapter 21: Strengthening social and emotional learning in children with special needs	333
Wendi Beamish and Beth Sagers
Introduction	333
Recommended teaching model for SEL	334
Building positive relationships	334
Providing supportive and safe learning environments	336
Teaching critical social-emotional skills	339
Partnering with families	343
Conclusion	344
Summary	345
Questions	345
References	345

Part 4: Leadership and innovations

Chapter 22: Teachers' roles in building girls' leadership identity 349

Nicole Archard, Romana Morda and Manjula Waniganayake

Introduction	349
Social and cultural influences on women and girls	350
Defining leadership: Distinguishing between leadership and dominance	351
Girls and leadership: Confidence and self-efficacy	354
Conclusion	358
Summary	359
Questions	359
References	359

Chapter 23: Building the capacity of early childhood educators to promote children's mental health: Learnings from three new programs 362

Sarah Cavanagh, Jo Cole, Judy Kynaston, Kim-Michelle Gilson, Elise Davis and Gavin Hazel

Acknowledgement	362
Introduction	362
Response Ability	363
Thrive	367
KidsMatter Early Childhood	370
Challenges to bringing about change	375
Moving forward	376
Conclusion	377
Summary	378
Questions	378
References	378

Chapter 24: Loose parts on the school playground: A playful approach to promoting health and wellbeing for children of all abilities 380

Shirley Wyver, Anita Bundy, Lina Engelen, Geraldine Naughton and Anita Nelson Niehues

Introduction	380
Playfulness	380
Early years learners' risk-taking and wellbeing	382
Physical activity and wellbeing	383
The Sydney Playground Project	384
Conclusion	388
Summary	389
Questions	389
References	390

Chapter 25: Using contemplative practices to enhance teaching, leadership and wellbeing	392
Alison Black, Gillian Busch and Christine Woodrow
Introduction	392
'Being': A foundation for inquiry	393
Ways of knowing and experiencing our work	394
Lifelong practices and commitments	397
Practising mindfulness strategies	399
Reflective writing	400
Using metaphor and drawing	403
Conclusion	405
Summary	406
Questions	406
References	406
Index	409