Contents

Preface xiii

1 The Managerial World: Expectation versus Reality 1
Why Is Management So Difficult? 3
They Never Tell You How 5
Why Managers Do What They Do • What a Good Manager Should Achieve • How: The Significance of Process
Rhetoric versus Reality 7
The "Professional" Manager • The Appeal of Expert Decision Making
A Systems World 10
Contradictions • Is Administration Nonwork or Chaos? • What Managers Say about Their Work • Relationships: The Core of Managerial Work • Revising Expectations: The Beginning of Knowledge
Conclusions 19

2 An Overview of Managerial Work 23
The Logic of Managerial Work 24
The Role of the Manager

3 Asserting Authority 29
Understanding Primitive Leadership: The Elemental Skills 30
Handling Pair Events • Handling Set Events

6 Gaining Power in Any Organization 85
What Is Power? 86
Getting Power by Avoiding Routinization 87
Gaining Visibility • Visibility and Critical Skills
Shifting the Status of Your Department 90
Strategies to Increase Status • Advocacy • Illicit Power Ploys
Intergroup Struggles for Power 93
Professionalization of Purchasing • Conflicts with Engineering • Conflicts with Production Scheduling • Techniques for Handling Lateral Relations • Modifying the Organization • Professionalization of Packaging Design
Power Begets Power: Conclusions 101

7 Working the Hierarchy 103
Being "In-the-Middle" 104
Boundary Maintenance • Persuading the Boss
Resolving Stalemates 110
Engineering a Stalemate • Refusing to Arbitrate
Bypassing Downward 112
Conclusions 113

8 Designing Workable, Valid Controls 115
The Uses of Controls 116
Types of Controls • Typical Problems
Low-Level Controls to Constrain and Motivate Subordinates 117
Positive Reinforcement for Every Job Element • As Rules • Motivational Targets • Effective Use of Targets
Middle-Level Controls 128
Describing the Job in Systems Terms • Measuring Trade-offs • Initiative in Adaptation • Use in Delegation and Promotion Decisions • Why "Systems" Controls?
High-Level Controls to Reassure Outsiders 135
Conclusions 136

9 The Challenge of Introducing Change 137
Interventions 138
Restructuring Work 139
Using Participation for Change • Managers as Their Own Change Agents

Major Reorganizations 145
Symptoms of Need for Structural Reform
Approaching Major Organizational Change 147
The Myths of Change • Putting Implementation in Perspective
Facilitating Change 158
Every Manager a Project Manager
Project Management Techniques of Change 161
The "Unworkable" Scrubber Case • Unanticipated Opportunities
Conclusions 166

10 The Skills of the Project Manager 169
Why Use Projects? 170
Facilitating Change • The Role of the Project Manager • Project Inception
Keeping Time Behaviorally 174
Contrast with Traditional Management
Behavioral Skills 176
Bargaining • Coaching • Confrontations and Challenges • Intervention and Participation • Indirection versus Orders • Waiting • Providing Assistance • Use of Meetings • Different Groups for Different Problems • Technical Coordination
Product and Brand Managers 183
The Trend toward Matrix Management 184
Conclusions 185

11 Is There a Managerial Personality? 189
Cultural Values or Individual Differences? 190
Level of Cognitive Development 192
Rigid and Simplistic: Expecting Consistency and Unity • Adversary: It's a Dog-Eat-Dog World • Super-Sales-Oriented • Compromising • Creatively Integrative
Time Orientation 198
Thinking Types • Feeling Types • Intuitive Types • Sensation Types • Top Management Teams

Interactional Differences among Managers 202
Contrasts in Interactional Energy • Specific Interactional Skills
Problem-solving Abilities 205
Problem (or Opportunity) Identification • Gaining Information • Analysis • Decision Making and Implementation • Problem Solving and Neuroses • Karen Horney's Types
Executive Age and Performance 215
Conclusions 216

Index 218